INTRODUCTION

This is a Florida 2012 County Judicial Elections guide. It offers links to candidate biographical and background information that has been found online. We do not endorse any candidates in this guide, nor do we approve of their websites. This is mainly meant to help you begin your process of discerning on which judge to vote for within your county and shorten the research process.

The Florida Bar has published a 2012 judicial voter guide, an informative resource for questions about Florida judges, judicial elections and merit retention.

The Florida Bar's Judicial Administration and Evaluation Committee established the Voluntary Self-Disclosure Statement which allows judicial candidates to publish statements on the Florida Bar website about their backgrounds and qualifications to be judges.

GENERAL INFORMATION

The remaining Florida judicial elections will comprise of a general election on November 6th. The judicial system can be broken down into four categories: Supreme Court, District Court, Circuit Court and County Court. This Guide includes information on the District, Circuit and County Court races that will appear on your general election ballot.

For information about Supreme Court races, see our Supreme Court Voter Guide which shows how the justices voted on important cases.

SUPREME COURT

The Supreme Court of Florida has a merit retention system. Merit retention is a system of selecting Justices established by the voters when they amended the Florida Constitution in the 1970s. Under merit retention, the Governor appoints new Justices from a list of three to six names submitted by a Judicial Nominating Commission. The Governor must select from the list. Once appointed, Justices eventually must face the voters in a "yes" or "no" vote as to whether they should remain on the bench.

New Justices face their first merit retention vote in the next general election that occurs more than one year after their appointment. If not retained in office, the Justice will be replaced in the same manner appointed. Justices' merit retention races are conducted on a statewide basis.

If retained, the Justice serves a six-year term beginning in early January following the merit retention election. The Justices then will again face an up or down vote in the general election occurring just before the six-year term expires. If not retained in office, the Justice will be replaced through the Judicial Nominating Commission system.

All terms of Justices end in early January of the year following their merit retention elections.

For more information about Supreme Court races, see our Supreme Court Voter Guide which shows how the justices voted on important cases.

DISTRICT COURT

The Constitution now provides that the Legislature shall divide the State into appellate court districts and there shall be a district court of appeal (DCA) serving each district. There are five such districts headquartered in Tallahassee, Lakeland, Miami, West Palm Beach, and Daytona Beach.

DCA judges must meet the same eligibility requirements for appointment to office, and they are subject to the same procedures and conditions for discipline and removal from office, as Justices of the Supreme Court. Like Supreme Court Justices, district court judges also serve terms of six years and will be eligible for successive terms under a merit retention vote of the electors in their districts. In each district court, a chief judge, who is selected by the district court judges within the district, is responsible for the administrative duties of the court.

CIRCUIT COURT

The Constitution provides that a circuit court shall be established to serve each of the 20 judicial circuit established by the Legislature. Within each circuit there may be any number of judges, depending upon the population and caseload of the particular area.

To be eligible for the office of circuit judge, a person must be an elector of a county within the circuit and must have been admitted to the practice of law in the state for the preceding five years.

Circuit court judges are elected by the voters of the circuits in nonpartisan, contested elections against other persons who choose to qualify as candidates for the position. Circuit court judges serve for six-year terms, and they are subject to the same disciplinary standards and procedures as Supreme Court Justices and district court judges.

A chief judge is chosen from among the circuit judges and county judges in each judicial circuit to carry out administrative responsibilities for all trial courts (both circuit and county courts) within the circuit.

COUNTY COURTS

The Constitution establishes a county court in each of Florida's 67 counties. The number of judges in each county court varies with the population and caseload of the county. To be eligible for the office of county judge, a person must be an elector of the county and must have been a member of The Florida Bar for five years; in counties with a population of 40,000 or less, a person must only be a member of The Florida Bar.

County judges are eligible for assignment to circuit court, and they are frequently assigned as such within the judicial circuit that embraces their counties. County judges serve six-year terms, and they are subject to the same disciplinary standards, and to the jurisdiction of the Judicial Qualifications Commission, as all other judicial officers.

If there are two or more candidates in a contested County Court race, they will be on the ballot in the primary. If one candidate receives a majority of the votes in the primary, they automatically win and will not appear on the general election ballot. If there is no majority vote in primary, the two candidates with the most votes will advance to the general election.

Unopposed candidates will not appear on the ballot, but will be considered automatically elected following the general elections.
